A Wonderful Complexion WITH WHITBREAD

The English race has for over 100 years consumed the famous Whitbread English Ale or Whitbread Renowned Stout (Malted Extract), made from the finest barley, malt and hops. Matured naturally in bottles in England and sent direct to America by the great house of Whitbread and do not contain any artificial gas. The greatest doctors in England have recommended to thousands of women the Whitbread Stout for their ailments. For mothers, invalids and those in a nervous, run-down condition it is invaluable. The most temperate people drink Whitbread Ale because it is not only a delicious beverage but a blood giver and tonic. Doctors, clergymen and professional men have epidemic that the increase averages half a dozen every night. On the roofs of houses, hotels, garages and stores everywhere rise the primitive aërials. Down below in his little room sits the amateur with his ear phone clasped to his head drinking the news, conveyed surely and swiftly to him through the wireless signals. These wireless outfits cost on the average about $50, but for even less these wireless eavesdroppers can pluck from the skies secrets of state, finance and commerce and often fervent messages of love and affection. The amateur wireless craze is distributed over all sorts and conditions of people. The humblest as well as the wealthiest class are keenly interested. University men, mechanics, clerks, doctors, lawyers and clergymen are experimenting. In Harlem a wireless lovers' club is reported. Half a dozen couples have installed wireless apparatus and the Harlem atmosphere is surcharged with wages of devotion and affection half an hour after parting time every night. Stories are told of a number of wave tangles that mixed up sweethearts who were tuned up wrong for the interchange of mutual confidences. Laws have been passed which were intended to curb the activities of these amateur wireless enthusiasts, but in spite of the student and experimenter continues to "butt in." Records show that he increases and multiplies between every rising and setting of the sun and his interloping keeps pace with the increase. Amateur wireless operators put up a strong defense against the accusation of being eavesdroppers. They claim that they have frequently been the first to hear signals of distress from ships. They also assert that by their experiments many devices have been added to wireless patents.

New York's position as the world's largest producer of manufactures is pretty generally eclipsed by the importance popularly attached to Wall street and the Stock Exchange, to the "Great White Way" and its attractions, to Tammany Hall, and to such other features which, though distinguishing, may be classed as incidental to the city's real growth and greatness. It may be hard to realize, but is none the less true, that there are in operation within the city's limits as many as 30,000 factories, employing—in round figures—550,000 operatives and 110,000 office workers, on pay rolls aggregating over $700,000,000 per annum. These factories annually produce goods to the value of over $2,600,000,000, of which approximately $1,400,000,000 is paid for materials, leaving about $1,200,000,000 as the value added by manufacture or the wealth actually produced by 750,000 workers. In other words, New York City makes more merchandise than does any state in the Union; in fact, its total production is at least five-sixths as large as the aggregate of the six New England states, which section is popularly supposed to lead all others in manufactures. Says a New England manufacturer who is moving his large works to New York: "I thought such a large business as mine would attract some attention, but find that it is so small compared with the manufacturing done in New York City that it will not attract the least bit of notice; it will be only a very small drop in a very large bucket." The largest industry in New York is the manufacture of clothing, in which alone are engaged more than 7000 factories and approximately 190,000 wage earners; the total value of products amount to $650,000,000, of which $350,000,000 covers feminine apparel, leaving only $300,000,000 for mere man.

J. D. Morrow, rancher and butcher, 517 Main street, Pendleton, Oregon, says: "I had pain in the small of my back for about three months. The recent thefts from prominent New Yorkers summering at fashionable resorts of more than $200,000 worth of jewels has brought to light the fact that many of the famous necklaces and tiaras are most infrequently worn, their places being taken by duplicates made of imitation stones. The apparent ease with which these treasures are stolen, in many cases never to be recovered, warrants wonder that the practice of wearing duplicates instead of the originals is not more prevalent, especially at summering places where the owners are naturally more careless and frolicsome and not so well provided with safes and strong boxes as at home. Concerns so engaged are now duplicating precious stones so faithfully that only experts may distinguish between the real and the sham, and often the copies are said to outshine the originals. As a matter of fact, many women of large wealth, who own famous jewels, make no secret of the fact that their most prized gems are seldom taken from the safe deposit vaults, though nevertheless they are on occasions large and small admired by proxy—as it were; and not infrequently do the imitation itself cost a small fortune.

That these United States are about to enjoy for the very first time in all their history the honor of a visit from a real reigning European sovereign is promised (or threatened) by the proposed landing here in the near future of Albert I, sovereign Prince of Monaco and overlord of the world-famed and world-famous gambling resort—Monte Carlo. Hitherto we have had to content ourselves so far as ruling royalty is concerned, with the privilege of welcoming the late Emperor Don Pedro of Brazil in 1876, and some years later Kalakaua, the dusky king of the Sandwich Islands. It was during the life and reign of Queen Victoria that King Edward VII, then the Prince of Wales, made his memorable visit. Another report, most interesting in this connection, is that King George and Queen Mary are contemplating a trip to Washington and New York before returning home from their tour of Canada next year. Already in official and social circles discussion has begun as to the honors due these distinguished guests-to-be and the etiquette that will befit the occasions; there being no precedent whatever for guidance. It is safe to assume, however, that his exalted rank will insure Albert I of Monaco against too critical examination by the immigration authorities as to his gambling connections and the summary deportation that might otherwise befall him.

Few churches are so widely known by name as New York's "Little Church Around the Corner," yet possibly not one in ten thousand of those familiar with the name have seen it or would recognize as the same the now spacious and beautiful Church of the Transfiguration, in East Twenty-ninth street. The origin of its odd name is recalled to old-timers among actor-folk by the death a few days ago of Bishop William Tubnell Salme, late of the Reformed Episcopal church, but in those days rector of the fashionable Church of the Ascension at Madison Avenue and Twenty-eighth street. In September 1870, George Holland, a well known actor of his time, died here and the late Joseph Jefferson, in behalf of the son, E. M. Holland, called upon Dr. Sabine to conduct the funeral services. The doctor declined because of Mr. Holland's profession and suggested that Mr. Jefferson try a little church around the corner. "Thank God," replied Jefferson, "for 'The Little Church Around the Corner'." Dr. George Hendric Houghton, who had founded the church, welcomed Mr. Jefferson and the funeral services were held there. The story spread among theatrical circles and the fame of the "Little Church Around the Corner" became worldwide. It has been the church of theatrical folk who have been married there, had their children christened there, and been buried from there.

TO REPRESENT INLAND EMPIRE

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 28.—(Special.)—All Inland Empire sections and organizations interested in conservation of natural resources are expected to appoint delegates to the fifth National Conservation congress, to be held in Washington, D. C., November 18 to 21. The meeting will take place during the sessions of the national congress R. Insinger of Spokane, former president of the chamber of commerce, has received news of the decision to meet in Washington this year, together with a request to see that the Inland Empire is well represented.

"In view of the vital importance of conservation problems to this section, I cannot urge too strongly the importance of our sending delegates to this congress," states Mr. Insinger. "Our section of the country, perhaps more than any other, is concerned in matters to be taken up at this meeting, and all organizations interested should inform themselves immediately of questions that will arise, and should also have residents of their communities at the congress to participate in the deliberations."

SHOTS FOR CRIMINAL CLAIM TWO BYSTANDERS

SHANGHAI, Aug. 28.—Two bystanders were killed and several more injured at Chenchewu, province of Honan, as a result of the introduction of a new way of executing criminals. Shooting has been substituted for beheading and a few days ago when the first to be executed under the new law were being led to the execution ground, followed by officials, he turned about and began ridiculing the officers. Enraged by the man's insolence and abuse, the officials ordered him shot on the spot and the volley claimed two innocent bystanders.

GIRL ON HUNGER STRIKE TO ESCAPE HER STUDIES

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Inspired by the success of the suffragettes in getting out of prison by hunger-striking, 14-year-old Helen Muchan of Peterhead, Aberdeenshire, adopted this method of evading school attendance. She succeeded for three days, whereupon her father was fined $5 for being responsible for his daughter's truancy. "Is there any law prohibiting whipping a girl of that age and size?" asked the father. "Not for cause," replied the court. "Then she'll be at school tomorrow," said the father, and she was.

Face to Face Courtesy

GOOD telephone service depends largely upon mutual courtesy. The telephone is more useful to those who talk as if face to face, for civility removes difficulties and facilitates the promptest possible connections.

As in other intercourse, it often happens that two or more people wish to talk with the same person at the same time. Without courtesy confusion is inevitable, and the confusion is greater when the people cannot see each other.

The operators must be patient and polite under all circumstances, but they will do better work if they meet patience and politeness on the part of telephone users.

The Bell Telephone Service enters intimately into the social and business life of each individual. The best results come through the practice of mutual courtesy.
